Name: Tubera, Keanne Micah S.
Section: BAPR 1-3D

1. What is the service/product being advertised? (Describe the product)

The product being advertised is a carbonated softdrink called RC Cola. It is a refreshing beverage that comes in a bottle and is marketed as an enjoyable drink for consumers, particularly younger audiences.

2. Who is the target audience?

The target audience is primarily Generation Z (14-29 year olds) and Millennials (30-45 year olds), but particularly young people who enjoy humor, creativity, and unconventional advertisements. The commercial uses a strange/weird and entertaining approach to appeal to their interests.

3. What is the message or slogan of the ad?

The main slogan is "Basta RC Cola!" which can be interpreted as simply choosing RC Cola without needing a very complicated way of explaining it. It promotes the idea of enjoying something just because you like it.

4. What are the key elements of the ad?

1. Storytelling: The commercial begins with a typical Filipino family drama involving a son questioning his identity.
2. Humor: It introduces unexpected and bizarre scenes, such as the mother revealing an RC Cola bottle underneath her head, and the son showing 4 glasses stuck onto his back as he removes his uniform.
3. Visual effects: It uses unusual imagery and special effects to make the commercial memorable.
4. Sound and dialogue: Dramatic background music and emotional conversations make the unexpected plot twist more entertaining.
5. Brand recognition: The RC Cola bottle and slogan are consistently featured toward the end.

5. What persuasive techniques are being used?

1. Humor: The commercial uses absurd and unexpected situations to entertain viewers and make them remember the brand.
2. Emotional appeal: It initially uses family drama and the theme of acceptance to connect with viewers.
3. Surprise or shock appeal: The unexpected plot twist catches the audience's attention and makes the advertisement stand out.

4. Brand association: It associates RC Cola with fun, uniqueness, and a carefree attitude, particularly among younger consumers.

My Summary: The advertisement's main strategy is to make RC Cola memorable by giving it a unique personality rather than relying on the usual product demonstrations or taste comparisons.

1. What is the service/product being advertised? (Describe the product)

The product being advertised is Cornetto ice cream, an ice cream with a wafer cone and a sweet, creamy filling. It is presented as a treat that can be shared with someone special and enjoyed during memorable moments.

2. Who is the target audience?

The target audience is primarily teenagers and young adults (13-19 year olds), particularly high school and college students who can relate to friendship, young love, and the experience of having an unconfessed crush. It appeals to people who enjoy romantic stories and sweet gestures.

3. What is the message or slogan of the ad?

The commercial's message revolves around taking chances in love and expressing your feelings before it's too late. Since the characters are graduating seniors, Denise encourages Julian to go all or nothing when it comes to love.

The Cornetto ice cream also becomes a symbol of affection, as Julian eventually offers it to Denise, revealing that she is the girl he likes all along.

4. What are the key elements of the ad?

1. Storytelling: The commercial follows two high school friends, Denise and Julian, as they talk about love and relationships.
2. Characters: Denise is the outgoing friend who encourages Julian to confess his feelings, while Julian is more reserved about his romantic interests.
3. Dialogue: Their casual conversations, especially Denise's attempts to convince Julian to pursue his crush, make the story relatable.
4. Romantic twist: The mystery girl Julian supposedly likes turns out to be Denise herself.
5. Product placement: Cornetto is naturally incorporated into the story when Julian offers Denise an ice cream cone at the beginning and end of the commercial.
6. Emotional appeal: The story creates feelings of excitement, sweetness, and anticipation through the characters' friendship and hidden feelings.

5. What persuasive techniques are being used?

1. Emotional appeal: The advertisement uses the relatable experience of having a crush and being afraid to confess one's feelings to connect with its audience.
2. Storytelling: Instead of directly discussing the product, it tells a romantic story that captures the viewers' attention.
3. Romantic appeal: It associates Cornetto with young love, sweet gestures, and memorable moments shared with someone special.
4. Relatability: The characters' conversations and experiences reflect situations that teenagers may encounter in real life.
5. Product association: By incorporating Cornetto into an important romantic moment, the advertisement associates the product with sweetness, affection, and happiness.

My summary: The strongest persuasive technique in this commercial is emotional appeal. Rather than focusing on the taste or features of Cornetto, it uses a relatable love story to make the product memorable. It indirectly connects the sweetness of the ice cream to the sweetness of young love.